Home Field House Heckfield Green

Hoxne, Eye

“We searched for over a year before finding this house,” say the current owners of Home Field House, “and the moment we saw it, we fell in love.” It’s easy to see why. Standing at the very edge of the village, where the last garden gives way to open countryside, this remarkable home feels deeply rooted in its setting. At first glance, it appears to be a 17th-century farmhouse, with pargeted walls, a jettied frontage and decorative chimney, yet, as the owners discovered, it was in fact built in 1998 by architects who had worked closely with the National Trust. That heritage of design and craftsmanship runs through every detail: oak beams, Georgian proportions and a timeless sense of balance. Inside, the house unfolds with quiet grace, generous reception rooms and a kitchen that catches the morning sun through Gothic-arched windows. Outside, the gardens spread south and east, a sanctuary of lawns, fruit trees and birdsong, entirely private and unoverlooked. The owners speak of peace, wildlife, and long summer days spent in the garden, the essence of a life well-lived in harmony with its landscape. Home Field House is, in every sense, a creation of deep thought and devotion, a home that honours the past while offering the comfort and assurance of the present.

- Last house at the edge of the village, total seclusion with sweeping countryside views. Peaceful, unoverlooked, and wrapped in nature, yet moments from village life
- Designed in 1998 by National Trust-associated architects. A masterful fusion of period craftsmanship and modern reliability — pargetted walls, decorative chimney and jettied frontage
- Sweeping gravel drive leading to an elegant façade and landscaped frontage. Ample parking (up to 10 cars) plus detached double garage with mezzanine storage and new oil-fired boiler (2022)
- Over 3,000 sq ft (total/approx.) across four distinct reception

Explore the Suffolk Village of Hoxne

Hoxne is a quintessentially English village, quietly nestled within the gentle folds of Mid Suffolk, at the heart of the picturesque Waveney Valley. Just a stone’s throw from the Norfolk border, it lies some six miles east of Diss and seven miles west of Harleston (by road), offering a rare combination of seclusion and accessibility. Life here moves at a measured pace, yet the conveniences of nearby market towns are always close at hand.

Steeped in history, Hoxne is best known as the site of the Hoxne Hoard, the largest collection of Roman gold and silver ever discovered in Britain. The village’s rich heritage lingers in
