Explore the village of Corton

Corton is a small coastal village on the far-northern edge of Suffolk, set on low cliffs above the North Sea, with direct sea views and a quieter, non-resort shoreline used for walking, fishing and the year-round coastal path linking south to Lowestoft and north into Norfolk. The village sits about 4 miles north of Lowestoft for supermarkets, healthcare and the nearest rail station, with services by Greater Anglia connecting Norwich and Ipswich. Corton is around 2 miles south of Hopton-on-Sea across the county border, roughly 5 miles southeast of Gorleston-on-Sea, and about 9 miles south of Great Yarmouth via the A47, the area's main coastal road. Nearby, Gorleston-on-Sea has a broad sandy beach backed by a traditional seafront with a long promenade, family amusements, cafés and a theatre overlooking the coast, while Great Yarmouth's seafront is larger in scale, stretching along a busy coastal strip of piers, arcades, seaside entertainment, bars, restaurants, wide beaches and a landmark observation wheel, forming one of the region's most established seafronts.
